Agricultural Education

The Agricultural Education specialization prepares students for a variety of rewarding careers in teaching. This includes teaching agriculture and natural resources in middle schools and high schools, as well as educator positions in agency, community, and non-profit settings.

Students who complete the program of study for this specialization are prepared to meet the Florida Department of Education's requirements for agriculture teacher certification, and they also possess the "people skills" sought by employers throughout the agriculture industry and in other public and private sectors.

The Agricultural Education specialization provides the basic courses for agricultural teacher certification in Florida. Students must have a minimum 2.5 GPA to enter the agricultural education specialization and, during their first semester, attain a passing score on the general knowledge portion of the FTCE (or have met the requirement through alternative assessment). An internship is required for this specialization. In addition, graduates must apply to the Florida Department of Education for certification.

This specialization is also offered at the Gulf Coast Research and Education Center in Plant City, FL and through UF Online.
